

CLOSE BATTLE IN NEW YORK.

Roosevelt's Future Depends On the Result.

In the Campaign For Nomination In 1912 Says C. J. Cor- respondent.

A Washington Correspondent to the Courier-Journal says:

The refusal of Mayor Gaynor to accept the Democratic nomination for Governor of New York from the Rochester convention was a sore disappointment here, as perhaps elsewhere, to Democrats, as they believed that he could win in a walk. However in John A. Dix the Democrats have a good and strong man, and as Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt is the only issue, Dix is as strong a candidate as could have been named for the reason that he will receive the conservative and independent vote of New York State, which roughly estimated, is 100,000 votes.

The Courier-Journal correspondent believes that the contest in New York is close. It is Roosevelt and new nationalism against the principles of old nationalism. The latter represents the Constitution and the laws and the former a new form of government and in the end a dictator to run it.

The fight in New York for the next five weeks is perhaps the most important and critical one ever waged in this country. It means the old form of government from Washington to Cleveland or it means imperialism and the "man on horseback" as the leader.

The result in New York is doubtful. Roosevelt thus far has been successful. That he will make a determined and aggressive fight to carry New York for his ticket goes without saying. That he will even invade Tammany Hall and the sacred precincts of Murphy there is not a doubt. He has disrupted Tammany Hall by his assaults twice and he may do it again. He is a great fighter a past master in practical politics and a man of iron nerve.

The fight that he has now on hand is the fight for his political life. If he carries New York in November it means to him the nomination for President in 1912 and after that it means the ruler of the United States as long as he lives.

He is the boldest and most audacious man in politics since the Government was formed and the most inconsistent. In the West he is radical and "insurgent" and against Taft because the latter help him to capture the Saratoga convention. He dared not reiterate his speeches he made in the West in the speeches he made in the Saratoga convention Cummins, La Follette and Bristow have made note of this. If not the entire country. He is going to speak in Indiana. Read his speeches there and compare them with his speeches East. He has got a hold on the masses and he may sway them in New York and elsewhere. That's up to the people.

While I admit he is a wonder in national politics, nothing like him that I know of yet, I think he will be beaten in New York this year.

I base my opinion upon the recent elections that have gone before, the high cost of living the general unrest of the people and the conviction that they are tired of Republican rule that does not help them.

Hartford College Notes.

Since our last notes we have had many refreshing events to occur with us, which we report as follows: On Monday morning Sept. 26th, Brethren J. P. Tuck and W. J. Clarke were with us. Bro. Tuck leading the devotional exercises and Bro. Clarke favoring us with a splendid address which was much enjoyed by all the pupils and teachers.

On Wednesday Sept. 28th, Brethren Tuck and Clarke lead the devotional exercises. Hon. C. M. Crowe, a member of the Board of Education of the city of Hartford, favored the school with a magnificent speech, subject "What we owe, and how to pay it." Outline of his speech: First, what we owe to God. Second, What we owe our Country. Third, what we owe our neighbor and fourth, what we owe ourselves. These divisions were handled with skill by the speaker. Conclusion, "How to pay it" was answered by saying "By living obedient, honest, upright christian lives. We thank Hon. C. M. Crowe for this excellent and profitable speech. Be with us again.

On Monday morning Oct. 3rd, we had Brother Clarke and Miss Mabel Myers with us. Brother Clarke gave us a fine geography lesson by giving us a description of his trip from New Zealand to the United States, a description of the birds of his country. This talk was certainly enjoyed. One of the very best and most enjoyable events was the singing of Miss Myers, she admirably entertained the school with her beautiful song, beautifully and classically rendered. Our school is still increasing. Mrs. McGan moved from the country into the city recently, entering her daughter Miss Lela into the High School Department and her son, James into the eighth grade. Miss Mary Brown Elliott, of Little Bend, Butler county entered the Sophomore Class this week. We hope these new pupils will be pleased and profited by coming among us. The Intermediate Department had two additions this week. Carlos Mathews and Hugh es Hamlet. We hope our school shall continue to increase in numbers and interest.

MOUNTAIN MEN SHOT EACH OTHER TO DEATH.

Private Watchman and Constable Victims of Duel, Result of Former Quarrel.

London Ky., Oct. 3.—Private Watchman James Williams, of Corbin and Constable Henry Lee, of Reavy, Laurel county, met in the driveway of Sam Ohler's livery stable at Corbin this afternoon and without speaking a word shot each other to death. They began firing at close range at the same time advancing toward each other and fell in a heap and died in each others arms, each firmly grasping his deadly revolver. The empty cartridges in both weapons represented so many deadly wounds in the bodies of the unfortunate victims. Tenshots were fired and not one missed its mark. Williams body is pierced by six balls while his adversary received four.

About two months ago Constable Lee went to the home of John E. Williams, father of the other dead man, with a warrant for the arrest of William Williams, another son. The senior Williams and his son, Fred a youth of 18 years, related the entrance by the officer into the house, while the man wanted by the officer on a felony charge made his escape. The constable was fired on and wounded by someone near the Williams house. The fire was returned by Lee and the senior Williams and his young son Fred, fell seriously wounded. Both have almost recovered after being at death's door for many days.

Lee was only 22 years old but had won a wide reputation as a fearless officer. He was unmarried.

Williams was 35 years old and married. For a long time he has been employed by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company. He is a first cousin of former Sheriff Dan H. Williams, of Barbourville, and a nephew of the late J. T. Williams, former postmaster of London.

Fairly Well Attended.

The rally of the Farmers' Educational and Co-Operative Union held at Hartford last Saturday afternoon was fairly well attended and the speaking highly enjoyed.

DR. GADDIE MAKING STRONG CAMPAIGN.

Republican Nominee Stands Ex- cellent Chance of Defeating Ben Johnson.

Dr. D. H. Gaddie, of Hodgenville, is waging real war on Ben Johnson, the Democratic nominee for Congress in the Fourth district. When Dr. Gaddie was nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the Fourth district he announced that he would make a thorough canvass of the district, and he is making good with a vim.

Dr. Gaddie was in Louisville Tuesday, accompanied by Senator Taylor, of LaRue county, and both of them were very enthusiastic over the prospects of Republican success in the Fourth district. They have been in many counties in the district and they have every reason to be satisfied with the situation.

The fact that Mr. Johnson is making a race for two offices—Congress and Chief Executive—is serving to help Dr. Gaddie. Friends of Senator Jas. B. McCreary, Mayor Head, John K. Hendricks and William Addams are not enthusiastic in their support of Mr. Johnson.

Indeed, they resent Mr. Johnson's candidacy for the high office of Governor at a time when he is running for re-election to Congress.

Dr. Gaddie pointed out that in the event that Mr. Johnson is elected to Congress, and is then nominated and elected Governor, he will serve nine months of his term as Congressman, drawing salary for the same without rendering any actual service, as Congress will not convene until just the time that the Governor of Kentucky is inaugurated.

The people of the Fourth district do not fancy the idea of a man running for two offices at the same time. Nor do they fancy holding a special election, which would be necessary if Mr. Johnson was returned to Congress and then nominated for Governor by the Democrats.

No man in the Fourth district is better known than Mr. Gaddie. He has always polled the full party vote and has succeeded in getting a lot of independent votes. If he makes as good a race this year as he did two years ago—and there is every reason why he should make even a better one. Dr. Gaddie will be elected, for it is rare that the Democrats poll their full strength in an off year.

At any rate Dr. Gaddie and his friends are well satisfied with the situation. They believe that he has an excellent chance to win and are aiding him wherever they can. Dr. Gaddie is very confident and will be actively engaged from now until election day.

Beauty Show for Men.

The beauty show for men, which has just closed at Folkestone, was a big success this year. There was far more interest for the men's than for the ladies prizes, and the men seemed to take the show most seriously sending in entries by registered letter. No ban with regard to age, whiskers or moustache. Among the winners was a light boatman, who has saved 18 lives and holds the Royal Humane Society medal. Then there was an exiled Turk and a Russian relative of a member of the Douma. The handsomest man was the guy who won last year. Each beauty wears a number and places his head and shoulders through a "gold" frame draped with velvet, the idea being that his dress shall not count. The audience are supplied with voting coupons, on which they write the number of the man they think the handsomest. Well-known local ladies count the coupons in full view on the stage, and chalk up the tally on the blackboard.—New York Press.

FINED $500 FOR ASSAULTING GIRL.

Agreed Order Entered In Case of Sam Corum of McLean.

Calhoun, Ky., Oct. 4.—The proceedings of the McLean circuit court are rather dull, and it is the opinion of the court officials and attorneys that the term will end Thursday.

Sam Corum, indicted for an assault on Miss Zetta Jobe, daughter of James Jobe, of the Beech Grove neighborhood, was fined $500 and costs on an agreement between the prosecuting attorney and the attorneys for the defense. Miss Jobe is 16 years old, and Corum called at her home one Sunday evening to take her to church. Instead of going to church, she alleges that he drove to an unfrequented road and assaulted her. After hearing what the witness for the commonwealth had to say, the attorney for the state agreed to compromise.

A. M. Sandefur, who was indicted on the charge of criminal intimacy with a feeble minded girl, a Miss Smith, daughter of Mr. Smith, a liveryman at Beech Grove, will not be tried at this term, an order having been made for its continuance.

The first case called was that of Dr. W. F. Struman against George W. Crabtree. The case has attracted considerable attention because of the long duration of the litigation. When the case was called it was announced that a compromise had been agreed to by which Dr. Struman was to pay Mr. Crabtree $750, pay the costs in the case and receive the farm, over which the suit was brought. The case had been tried out twice in the McLean circuit court and once carried to the court of appeals. The first trial resulted in a verdict for Mr. Crabtree, but the court of appeals reversed this action and it was called a second time. In the second trial the jury could not agree.

FOR THE BUSY READER.

It is estimated by Illinois Central officials that the company's loss on car repair bills is nearly $2,000,000. The figures are based on the report of an expert accountant.

Katherine Bottl, the 13-year-old girl who slew her god-father with an ax and red-hot poker in Pittsburg, in avenging her honor, was acquitted of the homicide.

President Taft and Mrs. Taft are now house hunting. Mrs. Robert Dawson Evans having refused to renew their lease of her cottage at Beverly, overlooking Salem Bay.

Congressman Tawney stopped a runaway-horse near Inona, Wis., yesterday and saved several lives. He was badly injured by being thrown into a barbed wire fence, however.

Gen. Leonard Wood, at the conference of national guard officers in St. Louis, yesterday, declared that compulsory military education should be part of the curriculum of all school in the United States.

According to the Daily Mail, revolutions broke out in Lisbon Tuesday. The dispatch adds that King Manuel is a prisoner. Street fighting has occurred, warships are bombarding the palace, and all communication with the capital is cut off.

Besides the two battleships and two colliers already announced as the building programme to be reported to Congress at its next session, a decision has been reached by the Navy Department to call for two gunboats and two tugs. One of the gunboats probably will be of the type that navigate the Chinese rivers.

Family Reunion.

On last Sunday the Martin and Flenner family met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Martin for a day of uniting the family ties. Sixty one members were present. A splendid dinner was served and all went away feeling better physically and spiritually. Those present were: Mrs. J. N. Martin, Mr. J. N. Embury, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. N. Martin and two children, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. W. Martin and one child, Mr. and Mrs. T. C. Stratton, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gentry, and two children, Mrs. J. F. Travis and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. B. F. McKlaney and four children, Miss Harriett Flenner, Miss Goren Flenner, Mrs. John Embury, Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Martin and three children.

PHYSICIAN DIES AT HAWESVILLE.

J. H. Heavrin, Formerly of Ow- ensboro, Succumbs After Long Illness.

Hawesville, Ky., Oct. 1.—After one of the most prolonged periods in the history of Hawesville, without a visitation from the Angel of Death, his scythe cut a wide swath here last night, when there were three deaths. Dr. J. H. Heavrin died of a complication of diseases after being confined to his bed for two weeks, during which he suffered much. Some form of catarrhal gastritis was the nearest the doctors came to diagnosing his case.

Dr. Heavrin was born in Ohio county, Ky., forty-eight years ago, and after getting the best education the public schools and Hartford college could give, he graduated from a medical school in Louisville, and then began the practice of medicine in Daviess county. Eighteen years ago, after the death of the late Dr. Green Sterrett and L. L. Gregory, he came to Hawesville and has practiced most successfully and popularly here ever since. Only in the last few months has he failed to keep up his general practice. As a citizen he was always most highly esteemed. He was a member of no church or fraternity.

While practicing in Owensboro he was married to Miss Thixton, daughter of Mr. John Thixton, of that place. No children were born to them. He is survived by his wife and three sisters, the latter being Misses Georgia and Sarah Heavrin, and Mrs. C. E. Raley, all of Ohio county. The late J. P. Heavrin, of Owensboro, was his brother.

SELECT.

Oct. 6.—Mrs. Alice Arbuckle and Mrs. T. C. Hoagy and children visited Mr. G. E. Arbuckle and family, of Hartford, this week.

Ellis Arbuckle left this week for Birmingham, Ala., where he has a position in a railroad shop.

L. E. Arbuckle and family visited Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stevens, of Beaver Dam, Saturday and Sunday.

Messadems, S. M. James and C. F. Miller visited relatives at Rander a few days this week.

Hubert Faught and family visited Mr. George Faught and family, of Gre River, Sunday.

Deputy Sheriff A. W. Black was in town one day last week collecting taxes.

Rev. Black, of Morganfield is holding a series of meetings at the Warrens Mill Christian church.

We had a good rain two-day which was badly needed. The farmers are busy preparing wheat ground.

"NOT GUILTY" WENDLING PLEA

For Transfer to Federal Jurisdiction.

Contents That He is Entitled to Six Aliens on Jury.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 3.—Joseph R. Wendling accused of the murder of Alma Kellner on December 8 of last year, was ushered into the Criminal Court room at 11:30 o'clock this morning by the deputies from the jail. He came in from the rear of the Judge's seat smiling and looking as cheerful as a fellow without any serious charge against him. He walked right up in front of the clerk's desk and there he stood by his attorneys, J. R. Clements and J. Ray.

Judge Gregory asked if the prisoner desired to waive arraignment. At this juncture Attorney Clements said he wanted to enter a motion to set aside the indictment and enter a general demurrer to the indictment. He then also presented a long petition asking that the case be removed to the Federal court on account of the prisoner being an alien and entitled to be tried by six of his own countrymen and six of his peers in this country.

Attorney Ray insisted that the Judge pass on the petition at once, but Judge Gregory would not do that. The court wanted to know what plea was going to be entered. Judge Gregory ordered the Clerk to read the indictment, at the conclusion of which Judge Gregory asked:

"Are you guilty or not guilty?" With a gusto and a smile on his face the prisoner shot up his right hand like an arrow and exclaimed: "I'm not guilty."

Attorney Ray said that as the Federal Court convened next Monday he is anxious that the motion to remove be passed on at once. Commonwealth's Attorney Huffaker said that he would be ready to argue the motion next Saturday. Judge Gregory then said that he wanted to give all parties plenty of time, and therefore he would set Saturday for arguing the motion. The prisoner was then ordered to be taken from the court room.

About the time Wendling was brought in, the crowd surged forward to take a look at the prisoner. Many persons were present to hear the arraignment.

Told Czar to Go to Blazes.

London, Oct. 1.—The details of Ambassador Oscar F. Straus' abandonment of his trip with his family to Russia have just been received here. Ambassador Straus, who represents the United States at Constantinople, anticipated a vacation in America and before returning home decided to visit several Russian cities, including St. Petersburg and Moscow.

The United States ambassador to Turkey considers he has been greatly insulted by the Russian government and through him the American nation and the Jews of the world. The etiquette of civilized nations requires a specially privileged passport for ambassadors desiring to visit foreign countries. These passports absolve him from the payment of duties and other fees the ordinary traveler is subjected to and accord him unusual privileges and honors not granted to others. Straus, as ambassador from a powerful nation to Turkey, expected such a passport. Instead, the document sent to him was an exact duplicate of the passport which would have been made out for any foreign Jewish commercial agent traveling in Russia. It contained the passage that "one Straus, of the Jewish religion, is hereby permitted to visit Russia to look after certain interests."

Straus took it as an insult not only to himself but to the Jews in general and the country he represents in particular. He at once abandoned his projected visit to Russia, returned the passport to the Russian ambassador at Constantinople, and in a curt letter gave his reasons.

KIT CARSON'S BIRTH ANNIVERSARY

Celebrated Throughout the Rocky Mountains.

Recalls Numerous Achievements of the Great Western Pioneer.

Throughout the Rocky Mountains and the Southwest there has just been celebrated the 100th anniversary of the birth of one of the most famous characters of the heroic days of "the plains"—"Kit" Carson, trapper, hunter, scout, pathfinder and plainsman.

A year of centennials was 1999, the 100th anniversary of many men of world-wide fame—such as Lincoln, Darwin, Poe, Tennyson, Gladstone—but among them all Carson's life-history is unique. To him is due no little of the glory that has been heaped upon Fremont as "The Pathfinder of the Rockies," for it was Carson who acted as Fremont's guide and to a great extent made his success possible.

Aside from that, however, to Carson belongs much credit for the extension of our boundaries over the vast region of the West. He was an advance guard of civilization. For almost half a century his name was one feared and respected by the Indians from the Missouri River to the Pacific Ocean, and his presence a source of satisfaction and relief whenever he could accompany them, to the curvants that crossed the western half of the continent before the coming of steam transportation.

Carson was born in Madison county, Kentucky the day before Christmas, 1809. His parents moved to Missouri when he was about 15 and apprenticed him to a saddler at Franklin, Howard County. But Carson ran away after a year and in 1826 entered upon the career which made him probably the most daring and picturesque plainsman of his day.

As a preliminary to his life as a trapper, scout and Indian fighter, Kit Carson attached himself in the humble capacity of a mule driver to the caravan of Col. Cerro St. Vrain, one of the big men in the employ of the caravan a month before he gave an exhibition of that nerve and coolness that marked his whole life.

One of the teamsters accidentally shot himself in the arm, crushing the bone. In a few days gangrene set in and it was evident that unless the arm was amputated the man could not live. Not one of the men in the caravan would volunteer to attempt the operation. Young Carson, realizing the necessity of prompt action, declared that he would take the chance.

All the tools he could find were a razor, a saw and the king bolt of a wagon. He cut the flesh with the razor, sawed through the bone and sealed the horrible wound with the king bolt heated to a white glow. The operation was a complete success and the man lived to accompany Carson on many an expedition of later years.

It was while employed by Col. St. Vrain that Carson shot his first Indian. The caravan was camped at Pawnee Rock, in the Walnut Valley, one of the most dangerous spots on old Santa Fe trail. Every precaution was taken to prevent a surprise by the savages. The wagons were formed into a corral the animals being hobbled in the grassy enclosure. The guards were doubled and every man-jack slept with his rifle within easy reach of his hand.

At dark the sentinels were posted and to young Kit fell the important post immediately in front of Pawnee Rock, about two hundred yards from the corral. About midnight the camp was awakened by a rifle shot and the warning cries of the guards as they sought the protection of the inclosure. Kit was the last to reach the corral.

"What is it—Indians?" asked Col. St. Vrain.

"Yes," answered Kit; and then he added proudly: "I killed one of the red devils! I saw him fall."

But there was no further hostile demonstration that night. The trappers rolled themselves in their blankets and the sentinels returned to their posts. At daybreak Kit looked around for his Indian. Instead of a painted Pawnee, Kit discovered his own riding mule, shot through the head.

Of course the boy was unmercifully grieved by his companions, but the following morning at daybreak the caravan was attacked by Pawnees, and the young muleteer was so cool under fire that he won the admiration tion of the older plainmen. The Indians kept the little band fighting for three whole days, the mules for 48 hours being shut in the corral without food or water. At midnight of the second day Col. St. Vrain ordered the men to hitch up and attempt to drive on to the crossing known as Pawnee Fork, 13 miles from the Rock, and which is now within the corporate limits of the town of Larned, Kansas. They succeeded in making their way to the river, fighting every foot of the way.

Before making the crossing it was necessary to charge the redskins. Col. St. Vrain and young Kit Carson led the charge. It was a desperate attack. Six of the trappers were killed, but the Indians were routed and the expedition was allowed to go on its way without further molestation on the part of the Pawnees.

That charge at Pawnee Rock made Kit Carson's reputation on the frontier, and thereafter he had no difficulty in getting employment as trapper, hunter or scout. In 1829 he was engaged by the Rocky Mountain Fur Co., and in that service trapped along the rivers of Nebraska, Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Utah and Colorado, fighting Blackfeet, Crows, Sioux and Utes and coming into companionship with such famous frontiersmen as Jim Beckwith, Jim Bridger, the Sublette, Fontenelle and Lucien B. Maxwell. He and Maxwell became boon companions and life-long friends.

In 1832 Carson was employed by William Bent to do the hunting for the garrison at Bent's Fort on the Arkansas, 650 miles west of Fort Leavenworth. This historic establishment was built in 1826. The exterior walls were laid in the form of a parallelogram, and were 15 feet high and four feet thick. The fort was 135 feet wide, and on two of the corners were hexagonal bastions in which were mounted cannon. The wall of the building served as walls of the rooms, all of which faced inwards on a plaza, after the general style of architecture in the Southwest. The roofs of the rooms were made of poles on which was spread a heavy layer of dirt. The walls were loopholed for defense, and the entrance to the plaza was guarded by heavy log gates. The occupants of this frontier establishment were traders, trappers, hunters, Indians and French-Canadians—many of the latter having Indian wives.

For eight years Kit Carson lived among the motley denizens of Bent's Fort, his duty to provide meat for the garrison of two-score hungry men, with such guests as the Santa Fe trail and the exigencies of Indian warfare cast into the improvised structure almost 5,000 feet above the level of the sea.

So well did Carson perform this duty that it was with regret that Col. Bent permitted him to leave his employ in 1840. In that year Kit organized a party of trappers to work along the Yellowstone and its many tributaries. There was more or less desultory fighting with the Blackfeet during the winter, culminating in a desperate and bloody battle when the trappers broke camp in the spring. The Indians outnumbered the white men twenty to one, but Carson exhibited such superb daring and generalship that the Indians were routed after a heavy loss.

During the engagement the horse of one of the trappers was killed and fell with its whole weight on its rider. A dozen warriors rushed forward to scalp the unfortunate man. Carson galloped to his assistance, jumped from his horse, stood in front of his fallen comrade and, single-handed, fought the Indians until his men came to his assistance. In that fight over the body of his comrade he killed four warriors with his own hand.

After the winter in the Yellowstone and another season of tramping along the tributaries of the Platte, Carson entered the service of the Government, in which he remained, with one or two short interruptions, until the day of his death. On May 22, 1842, Lieut. John C. Fremont of the United States Corps of Army Engineers arrived in St. Louis in pursuance of orders from the War Department, to command an exploring expedition westward to the Wind River Mountains. He selected Carson among a dozen candidates for his chief guide.

During this expedition Carson had a narrow escape while hunting buffalo. He was pursuing a large bull, and at length drawing to the side of the animal, he fired. But at that instant his horse stepped into a badger's hole, fell down, and sent its rider sprawling to the ground 20 feet ahead. The bullet struck the buffalo low in the shoulder, and only served to enrage him so that after a moment of surprise he charged the unhorsed hunter, who, fortunately not much hurt, was able to sprint toward the river.

It was a race for life, and for several minutes it was nip and tuck which should reach the stream first. Kit got there a couple of seconds ahead of the thundering, bellowing bull and plunged in head first. The animal waited on shore, but was eventually killed by one of Kit's companions in the hunt.

During this expedition Carson distinguished himself by killing five buffaloes with four bullets, dismounting and cutting the bullet from the wound of the fourth, and continuing the chase until the fifth animal fell under his unerring aim. It is said of him that he was such an expert with the bow that he could shoot an arrow entirely through a buffalo while hunting on horseback, a feat that gave him something of a standing among the Indians.

Carson was with Fremont again from 1843 to 1846, and found paths for the "Pathfinder" from the Rockies to the Pacific. He fought under Fremont when the Mexicans were driven out of Northern California. In September, 1846, in command of 15 men, Kit Carson started on horseback for Washington with dispatches informing President Polk of the empire that had been won on the Pacific. But meeting Gen. Kearney near Santa Fe, the dispatches were entrusted to another courier and Carson joined Kearney's column in its westward march.

The battle of San Pasqual, in Southern California, followed. Kearney was outnumbered and surrounded. At night Carson made his way through the cordon of Mexican sentinels, traveled on foot to San Diego and returned with a relief force. In March of the following year (1847) he again left California and rode to Washington with dispatches for the President. In 1853 he was appointed Indian agent, which position he held for 15 years. He was honest in his dealings with the Indians, his word was as good as his oath, and he understood the Indian character so well that he had no trouble with his charges.

Col. Inman says that in his boyhood days his imagination was fired by the stories he read of the exploits and daring of Kit Carson. He firmly believed the frontiersman to be 10 feet tall, carrying a rifle so heavy that, like Bruce's sword, it required two men to lift it. He imagined that Kit drank out of nothing smaller than a river and that he picked the carcass of a whole buffalo as a lady does the wing of a quail. Ten years later Col. Inman made the acquaintance of the redoubtable Kit, and he was astounded to find him a "delicate, reticent, under-sized, wiry man, the very opposite of the type my boyish brain had created."

During a visit at Fort Lyon, Colo., where his son was living, early on the morning of May 23, 1865, while mounting his horse, an artery in Kit Carson's neck was ruptured, and though skillful medical assistance was at hand, he died within the hour—died peacefully in his bed with his own folk and his friends around him. His body was taken to Taos, New Mexico, so many years his home, and buried in the little cemetery. His rifle, which he used with such matchless skill for two-score years, was bequeathed to the Montezuma Lodge of Masons at Santa Fe, of which he was a member.

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

Where Labor Lacks Protection.

Troubles times for capital and labor have developed in Free-Trade England.

Disputes in various branches of industry, which seem to have passed beyond the possibility of settlement by arbitration, threaten to participate, very shortly, a lockout that will affect employees of railroads, shipyards, mines and cotton mills to the number of 650,000.

The London Spectator says that this unrest in the industrial world may conceivably be due to the Socialist propaganda which teaches that the employer is the natural enemy of his employees, preaches always the doctrine of discontent, and advocates political action by organized labor.

Whatever may be the various causes that combine to produce the disturbed condition, the fact that it exists in a country in which labor has not the benefits of a Protective Tariff stands out conspicuously against the contention of American advocates of Tariff reduction that adoption of their policy would improve the condition of the wage-workers.—Albany Journal.

PEDDLERS SELL
MANY BIBLES.
One Man Follows Panama Zone
Pay Car With Train.

Discussing the work of Bible societies in the isthmus of Panama Secretary Joseph R. Bucklin Bishop says that the American Bible society established a branch in Guatemala in 1895 and a subagency at Panama in January, 1910 with Rev. Charles W. Ports of the Methodist Episcopal church as its representative. He employs two assistants one a Chilean, to work among the Spanish-speaking people, and the other a West Indian, for work among the negroes. The territory covered by the former lies along the coast on the Pacific side as far as Chame, and to Nombre de Dios on the Atlantic side.

The west Indian sells on the street usually following the pay car each month, stopping at the villages in the Canal Zone. At other times in the month he visits the negro quarters the outlying settlements and the villages in the bush. A conservative estimates places the number of the villages in the bush. A conservative Bible sold yearly in this way at 4,000. The books are brought into the country duty free through the courtesy of the Panamanian government. The society has presented Bibles to Ancon hospital and to several of the hospitals and sick camps along the line of the canal and to the penitentiary.

The work of the British and Foreign Bible society is at present directed by Rev. Ernest G. Cook, pastor of the Wesleyan Methodist mission in Colon, who acts as volunteer agent. He selects his helpers from men in charge of mission in the zone villages. The territorial agent from Guatemala recently paid a visit to the isthmus for the purpose of perfecting plans for the establishment of a regular agency in Colon, and as a result of his visit, M. P. Kennedy is expected to arrive from England to take charge of the work which will be extended to the white population in the Canal Zone within a short time. This valorem on all Bibles imported.

We've Beaten Him to a Frazzle

We've beaten 'em to a frazzle! I said "to a frazzle," you may recall. You may quote me on that.—Theodore Roosevelt to the Reporters. When the New York State Convention Adjourned for the Day.

Due allowance must be made for Mr. Roosevelt's fondness for excitement, for his habit of speaking always at the top of his voice, and for his exultation over winning a hard and doubtful fight whose outcome—if things don't go wrong for him on November 8—brings a Third Term Presidential nomination visibly near to his grasp.

Still, we cannot help feeling, and many thousand of Americans will doubtless feel, that such exultant whoops would have been better reserved until the election returns shall have shown a conclusive popular approval by the voters of his own state of Mr. Roosevelt's leadership and Mr. Roosevelt's Third Term ambition.

Such strident shrieks of glee would have raised no question of good taste or of political sagacity had they been directed at the Democratic party after Mr. Roosevelt had succeeded in carrying New York for the Republican ticket and thus shown that his victory at Saratoga is not merely the preliminary proceedings of a party bankrupt at the polls.

The opposing party expects to be glibed at in this manner when defeated. That is a recognized rule of the game. However, Mr. Roosevelt is fond of making new rules with respect to good manners and other matters.

And when we remember that those whom Mr. Roosevelt crows over having beaten "to a frazzle" are other Republicans—some of whom were organizing Republican victories before Mr. Roosevelt was breeched—we must needs wonder whether this "new" way is good taste, good manners, and good politics.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Gerrymander in the Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court of the United States has under consideration a case brought to test the power of a legislature to gerrymander a congressional district so as to deprive citizens of equal representation and violate the laws of Congress requiring districts to be composed of contiguous and compact territory. According to decisions in Kentucky the state courts are not clothed with any power to question the discretion exercised by legislatures in redistricting the state for congressional purpose. It is now for the National Supreme Court to pass upon the question. The district in the case is the Eleventh in Kentucky composed of seventeen counties in the mountainous region of the state, whose vote at the last election was Republican 36,073, Democratic 14,729, Prohibition 513. The Republican vote was much more than double that of the other parties combined, and 21,344 larger than the Democratic vote. Every one of the seventeen counties is Republican by a large majority. They are not compact, but were grouped together by a Democratic legislature to deprive the Republicans of Kentucky of equal representation in Congress.

St. Louis need not go to the mountains of Kentucky for a gerrymander as foul and even worse. Into one of the St. Louis congressional districts the Tenth, is crammed a population excessive by nearly 100,000. At the last election the vote in the Tenth District was Republican 49,127, Democratic 28,634, Socialist 3557. The Republican plurality was 20,493. In the Kentucky district the total vote was 51,320 and the total in the St. Louis district was 81,318. Missouri's total vote at the last election was 713,439. There are sixteen congressional districts in Missouri, an average of 44,589 votes in the total. But there were 81,318 votes in the Tenth Missouri District, about twice too many in comparison with the others. The voters of the Tenth are getting only half the representation they are entitled to. This district in population was nearly 50,000 to large before St. Louis County was crammed into it to get rid of the county's 5000 Republican majority. The mountains of Kentucky are outgerrymandered in St. Louis and St. Louis County.—Globe Democrat.

Separate Waists for Autumn.

It is a happy bit of news to most women that Fashion is not only approving but emphasizing the vogue of the separate waist for autumn," says Grave Margaret Gould in Woman's Home Companion for September. The costume blouse will divide honors with the shirt-waist, and woman the world over separate waist, as far as usefulness goes, is well known and this coming season it will add to its practical and economical qualities an unusual measure of good looks. In the guise of a costume blouse it will lend its charm and effectiveness to the plain tailored suit, making it appropriate for many varied occasions.

FORTUNE IN TURKEYS.

Federal Exhort Says They Are Best Layers

Believes They Will Eventually be Developed and Lay More Eggs Than Chickens

I feel sorry for folks who have to eat hen eggs. If they only knew how good turkey eggs are they would exert every effort to obtain them. W. N. Irvin, a fruit expert of the department of agriculture, has this to say about the relative merits of turkey and ordinary hen eggs. Some time ago Irvin strongly urged the raising of turkeys for laying rather than eating purposes. His convictions on that subject have been strengthened materially since then. "There is no earthly reason why a breed of turkeys can not be produced that will lay as many eggs as highly cultivated hens," he said. "To my mind it would be a highly profitable industry. For example, if a man would produce such a breed of laying turkeys in the vicinity of the national capital and would contract to supply one or more of the leading hotels with a sufficient number of eggs to make them a regular feature of the bill of fare, it would be an easy matter to obtain 60 cents a dozen for them."

"Years ago when I was a boy folks on the farm used to be satisfied to have a cow give milk three months in a year and to make three pounds of butter each week during that period. Now they want 20 pounds of butter a week from a really first-class dairy cow, and milk 365 days in the year. The same rule should apply to turkeys. The time has long since passed when it was really profitable to feed a turkey a year and then sell it for food. After six or eight generations turkeys could be developed to a point where they would lay in the neighborhood of 150 eggs a year. In double that time they could be made to lay 200 eggs and even better."

Irvin declares that the turkeys will "come into its own" as a laying bird just as soon as some live man or woman sets about developing it along this line. Leghorn hens, he says, have been developed to a point where they have laid 240 eggs a year. "There is no earthly reason why turkeys should not in time do quite as well," he said. "And 200 turkey eggs would be worth a lot more money than can be realized from any hen eggs. Settings of turkey eggs from stock guaranteed to lay from 150 eggs upwards would sell very high. And a ready market for the egg for eating and cooking purposes would be found almost anywhere. A little advertising of the wares would bring quick results along this line."

Irvin eats two turkey eggs every morning and declares that he will continue to do so as long as he can get them. Mrs. Irvin also is very fond of the eggs, so they make no trouble in the family. Irvin is thinking seriously of establishing himself upon a small farm and developing a breed of laying turkeys. He is getting along in years and is willing for some younger man to "beat him to it," but he wants to see a laying breed.

A Tobacco Fortune.

The fortune of $12,000,000 accumulated by the late George S. Myers, one of the founders of the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company, St. Louis, will be found to have been divided, among his three daughters and his only grandchild, Geo. Myers Church. The will, it is expected, will be opened within the next few days. Myers died in Pasadena, Cal., several days ago.

The statement is made by members of the family that the grandson, who is sixteen years of age, will inherit about $5,000,000 outright. His mother and his aunts probably will receive $1,000,000 or more each. His mother, who was George Myers, is married to Herbert S. Coppel, her second husband, and lives at Tenafly, N. J. Mrs. Babcock has adopted a little girl, the daughter of a deceased friend. It is believed that the foster child will also be remembered generously in the will.

Under this probable distribution, the large Myers fortune will be scattered from St. Louis to the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. George Myers Church was in St. Louis at the funeral of his grandfather two weeks ago, and is described as a handsome lad of erect, soldierly bearing, inherited from the tobacco magnate, who was devoted to outdoor sports.

George S. Myers was born seventy-five years ago in St. Charles County, and entered the tobacco business at Wentzville, during the Civil War he removed to Alton and became a partner of James T. Drummond. Later he formed a partnership with John E. Liggett, and they rapidly became rich. They sold out at a large price to the Tobacco Trust several years ago.—Tobacco Tidings.

Cure All In Close.

Following closely on the hobble skirt for women comes an innovation in men's clothing that will be seen for the first time this fall.

The new thought originated in Chicago, it will mold the figure and according to demonstrations made by designers, will accomplish the following changes in the appearance of a man of ordinary build, without the aid of artificial means, such as padding.

Make a slender man look athletic. Reform the shape of a man who has a tendency toward rotundity of stomach. Give a "chesty" appearance to a man who is never known to take physical exercises.

The secret of the new style's power to change the wearer's shape lies in its design. The trousers are made to fit closely around the waist just above the hips, but not in such a manner to produce the feeling of tightness that comes from wearing a corset.—From the Chicago Tribune.

Saved From the Grave.

The Way They Kick in Kansas.

A story was told me while in Kansas when the hot prairie winds were blowing and amid the speeches of the Chautauquas of the Kansas way of taking up life's work. He was young and had just graduated from law school. His resources were exhausted, but he bravely swung forth his shingle and waited. But no clients stopped on that side of the street. His office rent was due and his clothes were becoming shabby, but he went to his office with a regularity that would indicate a thriving practice. He was deep in an imaginary case, and when the authorities were all noted and argument prepared he started forth down town and thrashed the Mayor's son, whom he met in the street.

The act aroused the righteous indignation of the townsmen and he faced an angry court. But in his testimony he was able to include a sharp attack on the Mayor and his administration; he quoted law from Lycurgus and Solon, and gave them the page, number and chapter every time.

The case was continued and sent up to a higher court; at last it reached the Supreme bench and the young man made the most of his opportunity to show his ability as a lawyer. He lost the case and paid his fine cheerfully; for he had established for himself a practice which assured his future.

The sentiment in Kansas to-day seems to be that in order to do things you must attack somebody in some think and made a good deal with a strong kick.—Joe Mitchell Chapple, in The Presidential Skirmish for 1912, in The National Magazine for October.

MOUNT HOOD FOR NATIONAL PARK.

Many Thousand Will Then be Drawn to The Peace.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 5.—Mount Hood will be made a National Park if a movement now under way is successful. Under leadership of E. Henry Wemme, petitions are being prepared for circulation all over the State of Oregon. These petitions ask the federal government to withdraw that part of Mount Hood now in the forest reserve and other portions included in United States properties, making of the whole a great park similar to the Yellowstone and Ginter Lake.

Mr. Wemme intends to ask every commercial organization in the state to lend a hand to secure for Oregon an attraction that will draw many thousands of tourists to the new park. It is thought by Portland people that the project is an entirely feasible one and that the Government will give it official sanction. The Portland Automobile Club will aid the movement of circulating petitions and in urging along the establishment of the new reservation.

While it is recognized that Mount Hood has not the varied sights of the Yellowstone Park, still the snow-capped peaks, the glaciers and snow fields and the comparative ease with which tourists can scale the mountain, which has an altitude of over 11,000 feet, make it particularly attractive.

The proposed park could be made easily accessible from this city and could readily be converted into a great natural show place at a comparatively small cost. With Mr. Wemme actively at work on the project, there is little reason to doubt it will be accomplished.

Insurgency Didn't Insurge in Ohio.

The home state of President Taft has furnished many interesting developments. Ohio politics have always been of the live-wire sort. The fact that Governor Harmon is a most likely candidate for the Democratic nomination has spurred on the Ohio Republicans to get busy in a way that nothing else could have done. The State Convention at Columbus was altogether one of the most interesting conventions of the summer. There was a large attendance of delegates—something over a thousand—and they all wore badges and came with the old-time spirit in the old-time way, when McKinley and Hanan and Foraker were having their great struggles for supremacy. The hotel lobbies were crowded, and excitement ran high, especially when James R. Garfield, the son of a President, threw down the gauntlet as the champion of Insurgency.

But the insurgency didn't insurge long in Ohio. The response to the mention of the names of President Taft and Senator Foraker shows why Ohio has become indeed, "mother of Presidents." The loyal enthusiastic, hearty and uncompromising following of Ohio men for their leaders has long been a phase of American politics not surpassed in any other state.—Joe Mitchell Chapple, in "The Presidential Skirmish for 1912," in The National Magazine for October.

A Dilemma of the Married.

"I find this correspondence business," said the traveling man, according to the Baltimore Evening Sun, "a very unsatisfactory thing. I mean this correspondence between a man of impulsive nature and his impulsive wife. For instance, here is a letter four days old from my wife. She says she's having the happiest sort of a time with a lot of very congenial ladies, who like the same games she does—her life at the seaside—and goodness knows the girl deserves it, for she's been held down mighty close all year."

"Now, that's all right. But a few days ago her letters were wild with complaint and worry—nerves only, of course. But they stirred my nerves—a man is always a bear when his wife tells him she's miserable—and I wrote back intimating with some sarcasm that while I was appropriately sorry for her misery I couldn't do anything on earth to alleviate it. I had helped her get to the seashore, was doing the best I could—well and man knows what I'd write. Now, right in the midst of this happiness of hers this letter of mine will fall like a corpse at a wedding. And when I write again and tell her how happy this letter made me she will be blue all over the one I sent before. Then she'll write me while she's that way, and before I get it she'll be happy again, and I'll be miserable and remorseful and repentant when her letter comes and will write her so, and she'll get blue again. It just keeps one of us stirred all the time, while the other is happy, or happy while the other is fussed. It's the worst hitch-hick existence in the world."

"The only way for married people to live is together. They should enjoy the same things at the same time. The other way, even if a fellow is having an enjoyable time he feels he's only half enjoying it, because the joy is not shared and if he's in tough straits and a good deal of a baby he feels abused and in need of the right kind of care and jollying."

The Beauty Corner.

Womanly beauty is about as rare as birds with four legs, according to an Italian of wealth and title, who has just published some interesting statistics in La Roma. According to this Italian statistician, among the French only one woman in every 2500 has any claim to beauty; his own race yields a possible one in every 2200. Spanish women of beauty come in the same proportion. The German woman he refuses to consider beautiful at all. England he says, has the greatest number of beauties of any nation of unmix blood, the percentage being one in every 1200.

This conservative Italian critic refuses to consider Americans as a race, because, he says, they are too polyglot. Considering the one City New York, however, he finds there more beauties than in any foreign city—about one in every 1200. And by "beauties," he says, he does not mean perfect beauties by any means. He means merely those with a few good features and no eccentricity to mar them.

The cruelty of this Italian gentleman, whose only distinction has been gained by his present statistics seems at first glance to be wholly un-Christian. At best, he can only pick out the women who are beautiful according to his own standards. We are sure that there are no women who are not deemed beautiful by somebody or other; therefore all must be beautiful. One man's opinion is as good as another's.

Thinking the matter over carefully however, one may find considerable logic in the Italian's remark, with regard to one beautiful woman in every 1200 in New York. How could the percentage be higher when Washington has cornered the market?—From the Washington D. C. Post.

REPUBLICAN TICKET.

For Judge Court of Appeals.

JUDGE J. ALLEN DEAN.

For Congress.

DR. D. W. GADDIE.

The trouble with the milk trust is that it is after all the cream.

President Taft is at least in favor of conservation when it comes to the "Pork barrel."

Notwithstanding the Hughes Anti gambling law, a big game was pulled off at Saratoga the other week.

The Democratic party in New York has gone out in defense of the constitution. No doubt the country feels considerably safer now.

A Chicago woman killed a tailor because he presented a bill which she could not change. Other tailors should take warning.

The Republicans will again elect their State ticket in Kentucky next year, provided men are nominated who stand close to the people.

It seems that New York is sure to have a direct primary law hereafter, as both the Democratic and Republican parties endorsed this system in their platforms.

It is said that in Austria there is only one privately owned railroad. The others are operated by the government and no strike has ever occurred upon any of these.

Mr. Roosevelt says that people have a perfect right to criticize the opinions of the Supreme Court. Wonder if he is willing to make the same concession to the people concerning the opinions of an Ex-president.

Tammany Hall ran the New York Democratic convention from first to last. The delegates openly taking orders from boss Murphy. This has no doubt often occurred before, but heretofore it has been scrupulously concealed.

We have always been in favor of the primary election plan over conventions and we see no reason why anyone should not be who is willing to trust the people. It is only a question of whether or not the people are capable of self government.

Kentucky "Kernels."

Secretary of State Ben L. Bruner has been in New York attending the meeting of the National Republican League.

The Hon. Tom L. McGregor, Assistant Attorney General, will make several speeches in the Tenth district in the interest of Congressman John W. Langley.

At Danville last Saturday R. L. Ewell, Republican nominee for Congress from the Eighth district withdrew from the contest. The reasons given by Mr. Ewell for abandoning the fight for the seat in Congress now held by Representative Harvey Helm, Democrat is the health of himself and wife. The retiring candidate is a minister of the Christian church and is about eighty years old. Hugh Miller, Clerk of the Circuit Court of Rockcastle county, was nominated to take the place of Mr. Ewell on the Congressional ticket.

United States Senator W. O. Bradley will be the big gun of the Republican party in the oratorical field during the progress of the campaign. The Senator will make the opening speech in the Fifth Congressional district on October 16. He is now devoting his efforts to the interest of his party in the Eighth district.

Congressman Ollie James, who is a candidate for United States Senator against Senator Paynter, wants the Senatorial nomination decided by a primary or a convention composed of delegates selected by the different counties. It is said that Mr. James is not wedded to either plan, but simply insists that the nomination be made in a way that the will of the people acting in their direct capacity may control the choice of candidate.

The Hon. Robert Worth Bingham has been making some stirring speeches in his race for the Court of Appeals. Mr. Bingham is a Democrat running on a Republican nomination, and his platform is for a non-partisan judiciary and the abolition of bossism.

M. C. Rankin says that there is not any sort of doubt about him defeating Congressman J. Campbell Cantrell in the Seventh district. "It's this way," confidentially stated Mr. Rankin to a friend the other day I have never been defeated for an office in my life, never failed to make a crop a single year since I was old enough to plant one and never bought a pound of meat since I was born till I was elected Commissioner of Agriculture and you simply can't beat a man with a record like that, my boy. Nope, there's nothing to it, you can't beat him.

Representative Ollie James is going to be one of the main speakers for the Democratic party in the campaign that is on. Senator Paynter will also make a number of speeches for the party over the State.

It is said that in the event of his election to the next House of Representatives, former Lieut. Gov. William P. Thorne, of the good County of Henry will be a candidate for the Speakership.

It is being whispered around among wise Republicans that at the expiration of the term of Augustus E. Willson Governor of Kentucky his old friend Senator Bradley is going to say a good word for him at the White House and see that he gets a Federal appointment that will be equally as good in point of honor and salary as the Governorship of Kentucky. The Governor says that he is going to resume the practice of law which when he became Governor was one of the largest and most lucrative in the State but it would be very difficult indeed for him to turn his back on such a favor as it is said the Senator is going to arrange for him.

WALTONS CREEK.

Mr. Chester Rowe and family who went to Arizona sometime ago in search of a more healthful location have returned. Mr. Rowe thinks Arizona is too hot and dry. We all heartily welcome Mr. Rowe and family back to their old Kentucky home which we are glad to say they did not sell.

Mr. Alvin Ross and family visited relatives near Beaver Dam, Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. J. W. Carter and family and Mrs. Fanny Allen of Matanzas, were the guests of W. P. Maddox, Sunday.

There was quite a large crowd at the entertainment at Mr. John St. Clair's Saturday night.

Mrs. Arthur J. Carter of Matanzas is visiting relatives in this community.

Mr. Wing Ross and family Rockport Mr. John Rone and family, Centertown, Mr. Walter Knot, Matanzas, and Will Tichenor and family were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Benton, Sunday.

We had quite an interesting Sunday School at the church Sunday. Misses Norma Belle, Ida Coffman and Annie Everly and Messrs. Silas, Marvin and Ellis Bell, Rowe Condit and Fritz Jenny, Matanzas, were welcome visitors. We hope they will come back again. If there were others we did not get their names.

The Jewish New Year.

On Monday evening and Tuesday Jewish people observed the Rish Hashannah, or New Year's Day of the year 5671.

The meaning and purpose of this festival is not set forth explicitly in the Bible; we are left to infer them from the scriptural titles of the day "The Memorial of Blowing of Trumpets" (Lev. XXIII 24) and the day of Blowing the Trumpet (Numbers XXIX as well as from the fact that the Jewish New Year is the seventh new moon of the Hebrew calendar. In the Bible age every new moon was regarded as a solemn occasion and the seventh, the sacred number, was especially so.

It became the day of the blowing of the trumpet—par excellence—reminding the Israelites that a new period of time begins; and that no occasion could be more appropriate for the endeavor after a new life for amendment and reconciliation with God. It was the day of Memorial when Israel felt himself held by God in merciful remembrance. But if Israel would have God mindful of him he must be mindful of his responsibilities, to Him and to man's higher nature. The symbolic act of sounding the Shofar; or ram's horn which is performed in the synagogues in obedience to the scriptural precept is intended to bring home to the Israelite this aspect of the day's meaning.

It is a solemn occasion, though not a mournful one. It is a day of chastened memories, a day of reflecting on man's frailty of character. But beneath this sombre sense of weakness but physical and moral, there lies in the worshiper's heart the serene certitude of God's justice and mercy.

REPUBLICANS ORGANIZING FOR THE FRAY.

Bradley Strong Factor in Arena of Politics if He Desires.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 4.—At the New Galt House, where the Republican headquarters are looked after by the Hon. H. Clay Howard, Chairman, and the Hon. Alvis S. Bennett, Secretary, things are moving along entirely satisfactory to the Republican managers and candidates. Most of the preliminary work of the approaching campaign has been worked out, but there is still enough to do to make Secretary Bennett one of the busiest men in the country.

Republican politicians generally are of the opinion that United States Senator W. O. Bradley will be able to name the next Republican nominee for Governor if he so desires. At this time the Senator is undoubtedly the leader of the party in his State and it is said the organization in every district is more than willing to be guided by his advice. Senator Bradley, however, refuses to discuss State politics in any of its phases and it is not known whether he will undertake to control the situation in the State or not. Some persons are claiming that Caleb Powers carried the vote over D. C. Edwards in the Eleventh district due to the fact that Senator Bradley favored him. The Senator has never discussed this matter himself, but he smiled when he received the returns from the Eleventh district primary. This is merely mentioned as an evidence of the Senator's strength with his party throughout the Commonwealth. Another indication of Senator Bradley's strength was shown in his ability to get the various factions of the Republican party in the Fifth district into a convention in which the leaders voted unanimously, not only for the nominees of the convention but for every plank in the platform. One of the planks in the platform, by the way, was an eulogy of the Senator himself, which came from a committee made up largely of some of his oldest and bitterest enemies.

The Republican politicians are still discussing the names of Lieut. Gov. William H. Cox, Appellate Judge E. C. O'Rear, Attorney General James Breathitt and Secretary of State Ben L. Bruner in connection with the Republican nomination for Governor. State Auditor Frank P. James was also boomed for the nomination for Governor, but within the past few days he has announced to his friends that he will not be a candidate for any office and expects to retire about the end of his present term of office, if not before to his big blue grass farm in Mercer county where he expects to live quietly as a private citizen.

COOL SPRINGS.

Oct. 5.—Miss Lola Whalin returned home Monday from a week's visit at Centertown.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Hoskins and little daughter, Mercer Mines, visited Mr. George Benson Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Wilson of Muhlenburg county, visited Mr. Clarence Dennis Friday night.

Mrs. Fanny Neal and children left for Tulsa, Oklahoma, October 3.

Mr. J. B. Dennis lost a nice horse last Sunday.

Mr. Roscoe Wilson of Butler county, was the guest of Clarence Dennis Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Tate and little son, Glenn, of Beaver Dam, and Mr. and Mrs. Andy Mefford and little son, Latnie, of Prentiss, were the guests of Mr. M. M. Tate Sunday.

The protracted meeting began here Monday night. We hope to have a good meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. S. O. Fogle are the proud parents of a fine girl baby.

Mr. George Ferguson, of Rendon, is visiting his brother, John Ferguson, this week.

Moody Sends in His Resignation.

Beverly Mass., Oct. 5.—Associate Justice William H. Moody, of the United States Supreme Court, has tendered his resignation to President Taft, to take effect November 20. The President wrote to Justice Moody who is at Magnolia, accepting the resignation and expressing his high regard for the retiring jurist. In retirement Justice Moody will receive full pay of an active member of the court, $12,000 a year.

It had been known since early in the summer that Justice Moody would retire. He personally made known his intentions to the President and offered to resign at any time that would be most convenient to the Chief Executive.

Mr. Taft stated that he had no intention of appointing any federal justices until the regular session of Congress had convened. He urged Justice Moody to take his own time. The enabling act passed in behalf of Judge Moody, who has not served a sufficient length of time to permit of his retirement under the ordinary process of law, expires late in November.

Justice Moody has been ill for more than a year. Despite the fact that he had known for some time that Mr. Moody's retirement was inevitable, the President said that he had accepted the resignation with great reluctance.

Mr. Taft holds Justice Moody in high regard as a lawyer and jurist and feels that he will be a great loss to the Supreme Court bench.

When he shall have appointed successors to the late Chief Justice Fuller and to Justice Moody the President will, within two years of taking office, have appointed four to the nine judges of the Supreme Court.

MAYOR WILLIAMS DEFENDS THE TOWN

In The Matter of the Fourth of July Reunion of Old Soldiers.

I notice "Old Veteran" goes after the town and the Mayor for the manner in which the old soldiers were treated when here July 4th, and "A Citizen" in reply says I may speak for myself, as though I were responsible or had something to do with it. Now there may not be much in this article, but somebody's name will be signed to it. If these old soldiers were mistreated, I, as Vice President of the Commercial Club, and as a private citizen of the city, am perfectly willing to hear my part of the blame, but as Mayor I propose to resent it.

The Commercial Club, and not the city, proposed to entertain these old soldiers. I was not President of the club nor was I on a committee and never came into the limelight of the affair until after that famous (?) welcome address when Madisonville came to see us. Then it was that Mr. R. A. Anderson very cordially invited me to deliver the address of welcome. I appreciated the honor very much indeed. I had my address prepared and had it been a fair day and a speaker's stand been provided, I would have taken great delight in delivering it. But no stand, and the heavy rain prevented me from taking part, as I had just partly recovered from a severe attack of pleurisy. The Mayor of Madisonville had the key, the city was wide open, so we had no way of preventing the rain.

Now Hartford is all right, and her citizens have no ill feeling for the old soldiers. The old soldiers are all right, and I feel sure they do not all feel like "Old Veteran." Some day you come back and old Hartford will show you a good time, even if I have to build a speaker's stand myself, deliver the address of welcome and reply to it. Let me assure you that we have nothing but the kindest feeling for you and that we meant you no harm.

NEARLY LOSES LIFE IN COAL MINES.

Earl Travis Saved From Death by Fellow Workman.

Earl Travis a miner at Buford's mine, came near losing his life early last Friday afternoon when he was overcome by gas while entering the mines, immediately after a charge of dynamite had been exploded.

Travis with several other miners, shot a charge of dynamite in the mine and taking the elevator, came to the surface to await the disappearance of the gas caused by the combustion. The shaft, which is twenty-one feet deep, he attempted to re-enter the mine, but there were no signs of any gases.

While attempting to go to the place where the shot was placed, which was fifteen feet from the shaft, Travis was overcome, and would have been asphyxiated, but for the immediate aid rendered him by a fellow workman by the name of Gordon.

Gordon brought Travis to the surface and called Dr. J. A. Kirk. At first it was thought Travis was dead, but he was sufficiently revived when Dr. Kirk arrived to talk. Travis will recover.

Mr. Caz Mason was kicked in the side last Saturday by a mule, but is not thought to be dangerously hurt.

Fiscal Court.

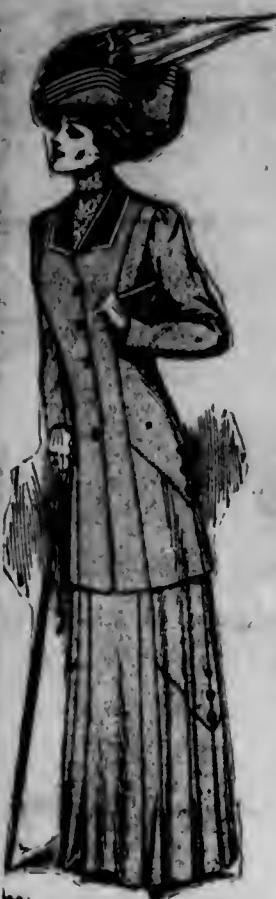

Fiscal Court closed yesterday afternoon after being in session three days.

Steps were taken to complete the working of the roads and the overseer in each district was instructed to continue the work until all the roads of considerable travel were put in good condition. At that time the road graders will be brought to Hartford, painted and repaired for next season. The roads which cannot be practically worked by the grader will be worked by other means and it is believed that within a few weeks the roads in Ohio County will be in better condition than they have been for ten years.

A report of special committee showing the necessity of a bridge across Rough Creek at Illies Falls, was filed and an order made directing that Mr. T. E. Butler be made an additional member of said committee and that steps be taken to cause Grayson County to be liable for her proportional part of the price of construction and that contract for construction be made sometime during the year 1911.

In view of some criticism which had been reported, the law firms of Heavrin & Woodward and Barnett & Smith in open court offered and agreed that the order allowing fee in case of A. B. Baird against Ohio County might be set aside and that it might be submitted to a jury of Ohio County citizens to fix the amount thereof and the Fiscal Court was given six months in which to decide whether it desired the order set aside.

County Court convened in regular session Monday and with about the same amount of routine business. The will of Mrs. Matilda Armendt was offered, proven and ordered to record. Mrs. Armendt was the wife of the late Henry Armendt, having died several years prior to his death. Why the will was never probated before is not known.

Mr. Green B. Shepherd died at his residence at Prentiss last Wednesday, of pneumonia. Uncle Green, as he was commonly known, had been in declining health for several months. His remains were interred at the Providence church burying grounds at 3 o'clock p. m. last Thursday. The deceased was in the seventy-sixth year of his age and leaves one son and a daughter, his wife having preceded him twelve years ago.

The Republican Executive Committee of Ohio County met at the Court-house last Saturday afternoon and was called to order by chairman R. B. Martin. The meeting was for the purpose of electing a campaign chairman and secretary. The result was the election of W. S. Tinsley, as chairman and Owen Hunter as secretary for the present campaign. These selections are good ones and the campaign will be in safe and competent hands.

The Ohio County Medical Association met in Hartford, Wednesday and was attended by a fairly good number of members. The doctors of Hartford entertained the other members present at dinner, a representative of each of the Hartford papers being likewise invited. A bountiful repast was highly enjoyed especially by an editor. A move is on foot, backed by a number of the leading physicians of the county to establish a hospital in Hartford. This is a commendable undertaking and should receive the hearty support of everyone.

Thursday, Oct. 13—Three Stern Alternatives.
The Week day services are held Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday at 8 p. m. and the evening services at 7:30 o'clock.

METHODIST CONFERENCE AT RUSSELLVILLE

Closes After a Week's Session—
Rev. Virgil Elgin Returned to Hartford Church.

The Louisville Annual Conference closed a pleasant and harmonious session at Russellville last Monday at noon. Bishop John C. Kilgo the president was never before in this part of the connection and had presided in but one conference previous to this one. His presidency and work was eminently satisfactory; and his frequent addresses to the conference were practical and at times with unctious and power and it is hoped will be of an abiding effect. His address on Thursday evening on Christian Education was conceded to be the ablest ever heard by the conference or in that city which is an educational center. It was gratifying to note there had been many conversions during the year and an increase in membership of about 4000. The charges generally are giving a better support to the ministry. The assessment for Foreign Mission of $11,400.00 was paid in full. On the whole this was one of our most pleasant and we trust profitable conferences and we hope the effects will be of untold benefit to the church. The supreme desire of the presiding bishop was a general revival and awakening and the response of the conference was a hearty "Amen."

The following appointments were made for the Owensboro district:

Presiding elder—Rev. S. J. Thompson.
Owensboro—Settle Memorial, Dr. Lewis Powell.
Woodlawn—S. C. Nunnly.
Prayer—J. O. Smithson.

Mr. George Dennis has gone to the Owensboro fair this week. Mr. J. D. Arbuckle is looking after his stock during his absence.

Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, in Session.

Shelbyville, Ky., Oct. 4.—More than 100 delegates had registered this morning when the annual session of the Knights of Pythias Grand Lodge was opened at the Crescent Theater at 10 o'clock and later trains brought in a number of additional visitors and representatives. The first session being open to the public there was a large attendance of citizens present at the theater, which was handsomely decorated for the occasion. Past Chancellor Leon Rothchild, of Tasso Lodge, this city, presided, and the Rev. W. R. Anderson, of the Presbyterian church, offered prayer. Mayor J. Linn T. Gruber welcomed the visitors on behalf of the city, and in a very clever speech gave the keys of the city into their keeping. Past Supreme Chancellor W. W. Blackwell responded to Mayor Gruber's address in a happy vein. The welcome address by Chancellor Commander B. A. Logan, representing the local lodge, and the response by Grand Chancellor T. E. Saunders closed the speechmaking.

A decided hit of the session was the violin solos by Miss Harriet Rockwell Poynter, of this city. Miss Poynter has recently returned from studying abroad and she completely captivated the visitors with her beautiful playing.

At the close of the open meeting the grand lodge went into executive session, which continued through the afternoon. After a brief recess for lunch at 3 o'clock this afternoon the degree work of the Pythian sisters was exemplified by the members of Esther Temple in the local lodge room in the Odd Fellows' temple and attracted many of the delegates. The degree team of Myrtle Lodge, of Covington, fifty strong, arrived at 7 o'clock to-night over the L. & N. and, beginning at 8:30 o'clock, gave an exemplification of the rank of knight at the theater before the delegates and visiting knights. Following the work a reception and impromptu dance was given in honor of the visiting knights and ladies at the theater.

No new candidates have developed for grand outside guard, which places the winner in line for the higher office, and it is likely that a warm fight will result during the election of officers to-morrow between Senator J. J. Watkins, of Union county, and Charles Miller, of Covington, for that honor.

Fair's Opening Was Superb

Last Saturday occurred the annual Fall Opening of Fair and Company's big department store. The store was tastefully decorated and each department made a fine showing.

There is an air of refinement prevailing in the dress goods section to say the least of it nothing to offend the most cultured and artistic taste. There is a wealth of variety and richness of material, that afford a choice that you could not expect to meet with outside of metropolitan fashion centers.

In the same department there is seen, shoes for business, for semi-dress for full dress, in all the leathers, and in a range of prices and styles greater than ever previously shown by this firm.

The Men's and Boys clothing department can well be termed headquarters for men's and boys' furnishings, for the vast stock and great assortments displayed could surely meet all wants of the men of this city.

The Millinery department was no doubt the chief attraction for the ladies who attended the opening Saturday. The showing was so complete so varied, so interesting, that there is little else to be desired.

YOUTH SEEKS TO REUNITE PARENTS.

Son of Kentuckians Make a Patriotic Plea Before Chicago Court.

Chicago Oct. 5.—A habeas corpus proceeding before Judge Pett, in the Circuit Court, showed a small boy's determination to reunite his prominent Kentucky parents, divorced for three years.

Mamie L. Mitchell, former wife of Edward G. Barrass, clerk of the Circuit Court of Ohio county, Ky., was charged with abducting her son from the custody of her own parents after which she brought him to Chicago and kept him in hiding. Barrass and detectives found the boy here. He had the custody of the child as the result of circuit court order. Judge Pett refused to take the boy from his father. He held the custody should rest with the Kentucky courts.

Mamie L. Mitchell is the daughter of Dr. Mitchell, of Beaver Dam, Ky., a family whose ancestors were pioneers. Maurice Barrass, subject of the dispute, left his chair near his father and went to his mother's side. "Don't you cry, mother dear," he exclaimed, patting his arms around her neck. "I wish you would give me a whipping and not cry. It hurts me when you cry. I'll make papa come and live with you again, see if I don't."

And the ten-year-old boy sought his father again and engaged him in earnest conversation. While the trial was in progress, he talked about his mother and father.

THE BOY FOUND.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 3.—Edward G. Barrass, of Hartford, Ky., to-day began habeas corpus proceedings before Judge Pett to secure possession of his son, Maurice, aged 10 years. Barrass says he secured a divorce from his wife in 1906, and the Kentucky courts awarded custody of the boy to his grandfather for 3 years. At the expiration of this time he says the boy was to be given to his father.

Barrass charged that on September 16 the mother of the child got him out of Kentucky and to Chicago. On the showing made, Judge Pett let the father have the boy until to-morrow, when the case will be argued further. The lad, crying and protesting loudly against separation from his mother, was led from the courtroom by his father.

The foregoing is the climax of nearly two weeks search for Maurice Barrass. About that time ago Mr. Barrass notified his mother-in-law that he desired to bring his son to Hartford and enter him in school and directed her to have him ready at a certain future date. Before that date arrived his former wife took the lad and left for parts unknown. It was later learned that she had gone to Chicago, and Mr. Barrass accompanied by his attorney, Mr. M. L. Heavrin, left at once for that point. After nearly a week's search they returned without having located him. However the matter was left in the hands of a detective agency and in a few days a report came that the boy had been located. Mr. Barrass and Mr. Heavrin again went to Chicago and procured the boy by habeas corpus proceedings. They arrived home Wednesday afternoon.

CZAR OF HIS SHIP

The Captain of an Ocean Liner
Is a Real Autocrat.

HIS WORD IS ABSOLUTE LAW.

He May, if He Deems It Necessary,
Put a Passenger in Irons or Clap
Him in a Cell, and in Cases of Emergency Is Empowered to Take Life.

Imagine a mayor or a judge of a circuit court or a county sheriff or a town marshal of a village of 3,500 population stepping out into the street and on general and self imposed authority picking up a citizen, ordering him to a cell and clapping irons on him for safe keeping?

Wouldn't the bird of American liberty set up a scream? Wouldn't the old and badly cracked Liberty bell resound in discord?

After one of the great transatlantic passenger steamships leaves the three mile limit of New York the passenger is in foreign territory on the high seas, English, French, German—whatever the flag at the masthead—the ship is a section of its fatherland, floating in the high seas, where only maritime laws regarding its transit in times of peace may hold check upon the czarism of the ship's commander, on or off the bridge.

No czar has more power within his territory than has the captain of the great Atlantic liner on the high seas. He is on an island of his country's ownership—a floating island, having a population of 800 employees and looking after the welfare and safety of perhaps 3,000 passengers. He is practically the administrative, executive and judicial single individual, such as exists rarely on the map of present day civilization. Aside from his authority over mankind, he may have $7,000,000 of vessel under him, to say nothing of the international mails and millions in gold in transshipment.

"There's the captain," is a whispered bit of comment made a million times a year in the beginning of the passages of great ocean steamships. And generally the captain looks the part.

It is not so much his uniform either. Ordinarily the captain is not young. There is gray in his hair, mustache or beard. That young man in his twenties, no matter what his schooling for beginning the work, isn't called at a moment's notice to the captain's bridge. He must have his maximum of training for six or seven numbers below before he is called to the foot of the ladder.

On the British passenger vessels most of the beginners at navigating an ocean vessel of the first class will have had a lieutenant's commission from the navy. It is from the royal navy reserves that the lowest officer's vacancy is filled. Filling it, he has his chance to rise to the position of captain.

As to the captain's authority: One midnight, when in a fog the White Star Baltic struck the German oil steamship Standard, the Baltic needed his captain, and he was there. His ship carpenters were rushed to the bow of the vessel and began the work of patching up the hole in the Baltic's steel sheathing.

Suppose that in a stampede of the Baltic's crew its employees had rushed up to fill his boots? It was within the captain's power to have shot down the leader—had he brought about war to the knife, revolver and rifle in the interests of his vessel and its passengers. Or had some passenger or passengers become pale stricken and against orders menaced the welfare of the majority on the ship death would have been dealt with the same rigid discipline which requires of the captain that he be the autocrat at his post.

There are no forms of writs or warrants necessary. There is no court in which the passenger or the seaman may give bond. In that instant of sudden great emergency which arises the captain's word is more than written law; it is the unwritten common law of the high seas, in the spirit of which the vigilance committee of the wild west of the United States rose, lawlessly lawful.

Today the captain of the great liner may step into the pilot cabin and command order. He may go into the smoking cabin and stop the game of cards at which the sharper is playing for his stakes. In case of refusal that ancient land right of "no deprivation of liberty without due process of law" becomes a farce. The cell room or even the iron manacles of the captain's authority may be used upon the individual who has paid $500 or $1,000 for his suit of rooms and his passage. On the high seas the captain's ship becomes an autocratic democracy. The individual in the first cabin and at the captain's table must share with the immigrant far below those equities that are granted to each in his place.

"Don't buck the captain," said an official in the offices of a great steamship line. "He is all there is of authority. He is the supreme entity of his ship. He is dressed for it; but, more than that, he is trained to it. He is empowered to take life if he must, and on land this is the most serious of all things in the statute books."

"Commodore of the fleet" is one of the offices toward which the old sea captain looks, not enviously, not with disdain. It is a naval number in the passenger service which marks the age of retirement. There is honor in the title. It does not descend to his children. He gives half his life to the gaining of it, and it means that his activities and powers are at an end.—Chicago Tribune.

THE WHITE WASH.

Its Presence on the Hudson Bay Company's Boat Explained.

It is as a rule of the Hudson Bay company that no woman be allowed passage on its boats. One day some years ago as a steamer of the company neared one of the northern most ports a string of white garments was seen stretched across the deck. The watchers were amazed, for to them the wash line suggested only the presence of a woman aboard the boat.

Comment was freely made of the scandal that would ensue and the shakeup that would follow. When the boat docked the line of washing had disappeared—still another proof of the scandal.

Later one of the landmen said to the captain:

"Why, how did it happen that you carried a woman passenger this trip?"

"There was never a woman along the whole voyage," was the indignant answer. "What do you mean?"

"If there was no woman aboard where did all that white wash come from?" was the triumphant reply.

The captain looked puzzled for a moment, and then he laughed.

"Oh," he said, "and didn't we have Lord Strathcona, the governor himself, along with us on this trip? And every day doesn't he insist on having his clean white shirt, no matter how far north we are? That's the white wash you saw strung along deck. And, what's more, doesn't his lordship insist upon having his London paper laid beside his plate every morning, no matter if it is a year old?"—Pearson's.

A MASTER OF METAPHOR.

It Must Have Relieved Him to Get This
Out of His System.

A water consumer in a certain city, whose supply had been turned off because he wouldn't pay, wrote to the department as follows:

"In the matter of shutting off the water on unpaid bills your company is fast becoming a regular crystallized Russian bureaucracy, running in a groove and deaf to the appeals of reform. There is no use of your trying to impugn the verity of this indictment by shaking your official heads in the teeth of your own deeds."

"If you will persist in this kind of thing a widespread conflagration of the populace will be so imminent that it will require only a spark to let loose the dogs of war in our midst. Will you persist in hurling the cornerstone of our personal liberty to your wolfish hounds of collectors thirsting for its blood? If you persist the first thing you know you will have the ebullient of a justly indignant revolution rolling along in our midst and gnashing its teeth as it rolls."

"If your rascally collectors are permitted to continue coming to our doors with unblinking footsteps, with cloaks of hypocritical compunction in their mouths, and compel payment from your patrons this policy will result in cutting the wool off the sheep that lays the golden egg until you have pumped it dry, and then farewell, a long farewell, to our vaunted prosperity."—Everybody's.

When to Eat Fruit.
To obtain the most benefit from the succulent fruits they should be eaten at the end of the chief meal. Bananas are an exception and may be eaten with any meal. They are very acceptable cut in thin slices and eaten with bread and butter. Stewed fruits often have their virtues wasted through being eaten at the wrong time. Six or eight stewed prunes half an hour before breakfast are beneficial; so are stewed figs or stewed apples eaten before breakfast. Peeled oranges cut into thin slices so that the juice is set free, with sugar strewn over the slices, are not unlike pineapple and form a highly efficacious aid to digestion. Grapes should never be eaten except after the chief meal of the day. Taken when the stomach is comparatively empty, they are a specially harmful fruit.—Family Doctor.

Ruler of Russia's Title.
The general allusion to the ruler of Russia as the czar is, strictly speaking, incorrect. His official title is "emperor and autocrat." Czar is the old Russian word for lord or prince and was abandoned by Peter the Great on his triumphal return from Poltava, his crowning victory over Charles XII, of Sweden. Since then the Russian monarch has been officially entitled emperor, and at the congress of Vienna in 1815 his right to the imperial term was admitted by the powers, with the proviso that, though he was emperor he had no precedence over the kings of western Europe.—St. James' Gazette.

The Modern Idea.
Roman Guide (impressively)—The ruins of the Coliseum! Seattle Man (astonished)—Well, what do you think of that? Why, I saw photographs of that heap twenty years ago. Roman Guide (loftily)—Quite likely, sir. Seattle Man—But why in thunder aren't those ruins cleared away and a modern Coliseum erected?—New Orleans Picayune.

"Why not? Our cashier took only $1,000 to fly to Europe."

ADAM'S PEAK.

A Shrine Sacred to Three Conflicting
Religious Sects.

Throughout Asia "holy places" are almost as numerous as leaves on a tree, but in Ceylon is a mountain which enjoys the unique distinction of being a very holy place to the devotees of three absolutely distinct and conflicting religious sects. This is Adam's Peak, or Sumanas.

According to the Mohammedan belief, Adam, after the fall, was taken by an angel to the top of Sumanas, and a panorama of all the hills that through sin should afflict mankind was spread out before him. His foot left an impression on the solid rock, and his tears formed the lake from which pilgrims still drink. The Buddhists contend that it was not Adam, but Buddha himself that made the footprint in the rock, that being the last spot where he touched the earth before ascending to heaven, while the Brahmins have still another legend. All, however, Brahmins, Mohammedans and Chinese, agree that Sumanas is a very holy place, and to perform a pilgrimage to the spot is to the Buddhist what a visit to Mecca is to a Mohammedan. In mixed crowds the worshippers come, each plying the ignorance of the other, who is so far from the "true way."

It requires no little faith and some imagination to trace in the depression in the rock the likeness of a human footprint. It is 5 1/2 feet long by 2 1/2 feet wide, on the top of a huge boulder. The natives, however, insist that it is the footprint of Adam.—Emmett Campbell Hall in Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

MINIATURE GARDENS.

Tiny Lakes, Trees and Houses in Diminutive Japanese Parks.

The Japanese have the art of dwarfing trees to mere shrubs and of cultivating plants in a similar way. The people take great delight in their miniature gardens, which require a special gardener to keep them down to desired limits. A Japanese garden is generally about ten yards square, and in this small space is found a park and demesne, with lake, summer houses, temples, trees, all complete and in keeping with the dimensions available.

One such garden shows a lake four feet long and full of goldfish. On the border stands a pine tree exactly eighteen inches high and fifty years old. Beneath its shade is a temple carved out of one piece of stone the size of a brick. On a lofty crag of some two and a half feet stands a fine maple tree, perfect in form and shape, fifteen years old and twelve inches high.

One household in Japan boasts of a complete garden contained in a shallow two dozen wine case. Everything is complete down to the fish in the lake, a sheet of water only a few inches square, and the footbridges over the water courses. Tea houses there are and numerous trees of various kinds, each about six inches in height. Old as the hills are these diminutive trees, but full of vitality, and yet never growing bigger.—New York Press.

Roman Post Houses.
Post houses on Roman roads were erected every five or six miles. Each of them was constantly provided with 40 horses and 100 miles a day was an easy journey. Any one using these posts must show a mandate from the emperor.

An almost forgotten poet, Robert Hickey Messenger, quaintly wishes for old wood to burn, old books to read and old friends to talk with in an ideal old age. And he might also have added, old tunes to be played in the long twilight while he dozed and dreamed in his easy chair.

Another Answer.
In a primary school examination, over which I once had the pleasure to preside, one of the questions was with regard to the five senses. One of the bright pupils handled the subject thus:

The five senses are: Sneezing, sobbing, crying, yawning, coughing. By the sixth sense is meant an extra one which some folks have. This is snoring.—From Woman's Home Companion for September.

Beat the Cow.

Portland, Ore., Sept. 28.—L. R. Glavis, ex-chief of the field division of the United States Forestry Bureau, had an adventure on his ranch near Portland recently that was in its way as exciting as his run-in with Secretary Ballinger and the subsequent investigation.

Mr. Glavis has a ranch in the White Salmon country and while tying up trees in his orchard, left a ball of twine in a nearby shed. While his back was turned, a cow got in and swallowed the whole thing. Mr. Glavis wanted the twine badly and he did not propose to be balked by a fool cow anyway. He showed that he possessed other knowledge than that of the woods when he sat coolly down and waited patiently until the cow started to chew her cud. Then he thrust his hand into her mouth, quickly grabbed the end of the string and started running for dear life.

Bossy followed, also on the run, but Mr. Glavis darted through a fence and ran the twine through a knot hole in a convenient barn. That anchored bossy, but Glavis had to run clear across his 200 acre tract and part way back before he drew out all the twine.

LESSON FROM FOREST FIRES.

Timber Owners Form Associa- tions to Maintain Reg- ular Patrol.

Washington, Oct. 6.—One of the lessons which will finally be drawn the trying experience of the recent forest fire season, in the belief of officials of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, is the need of wider organization among private owners of timber to safeguard their holdings.

It is pointed out that already in the Northwest, both on the Pacific Coast and in Montana and Idaho, timberland owners have formed themselves into associations which assess the members on an acreage basis and thus meet the cost of maintaining a regular patrol and fire-fighting organization. Only by getting together can private owners usually assure themselves protection, for fire is no respecter of boundary lines and the man who undertakes to keep it out of his own timber will want it kept out of his neighbor's too. When ever possible the Government's forest officers cooperate with the force put in the field by the associations, so that the employees of the Government and those of the private owners are handled practically as a unit in fighting the common enemy.

This co-operation is advantageous to both sides. Protection of the National Forests necessarily carries with it a good deal of protection of adjoining or interior holdings. If the private owners would everything should their reasonable share of the burden, the public would gain both through more general forest conservation and through relief from the necessity of paying for the protection of private timber in order to protect its own.

Worse Than Bullets.

Bullets have often caused less suffering to soldiers than the eczema L. W. Harriman, Burlington, Me., got in the army, and suffered with it forty years. How to Poise the Head.

For years American women have listened meekly, and indeed with eager interest to the criticism of the French because we have been told that the Parisian woman knows how to wear her clothes better than we do, and how to dress like a millionaire on less money than furnishes us with calico gowns. And so we are interested to know that one of their number has recently given away a secret of dress. She says that one reason the American woman lacks the thoroughbred air is because we do not poise our heads properly; that the French woman always carries her chin to show the top of her collar. Thanks for the suggestion. We will doubtless reform at once and carry on chins so high that our heads will topple over backwards. Seriously there is much sense in the advice, for many women who wear elegant garments let their shoulders droop and their chin sag down into their necks, thus spoiling their whole general appearance.

Storing Medicine.

"There is medicine, for instance," says the manager of a storage warehouse to a representative of the New York Times. "Nobody but the manager of a warehouse has any idea how many bottles of medicine are consigned to his keeping in the course of a year, and even he never knows until he comes to sell the unclaimed goods."

"We store away medicine by the gallon," said one manager. "There are patent medicines and medicines put up according to prescriptions."

"Of all the trash on which people pay room rent it strikes me that on nothing else is money so absolutely wasted. It is really a dangerous investment."

"Whether the people who put the stuff in storage have so little consideration for their own welfare as to take it after it has been packed away for a year or so is a question. If they do, it is their own funeral, literally and figuratively."

"Most certainly I would not take chances on killing off the population by selling it at auction. If I did care to take the risk, however, I am quite sure I could dispose of it, for the people who attend a warehouse auction are seeking with investment microbes and are willing to buy almost anything.

"But I have conscience in the matter, and not even patent medicine, which I feel sure is neither more harmful nor helpful than the day it was put up, is ever offered to any customer in this warehouse. Only a small portion of the medicines we receive is included in a doctor's outfit. Families and unattached individuals gather up whole chests full of medicine, which they are loath to part with, and it is put in storage to ferment and work out its deadly combinations."

Children Cry FOR FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

The Kansas Republican Platform.

The platform adopted by the Kansas Republican caucus of 1910, and labeled "Republican Platform," has in it so much of Insurgency, Populism and Socialism that Republicans will read it over with astonishment and doubt as to its being genuine.

Republicans will recognize in it many of the rankest planks of the Populist platforms of 1890-92, the adoption of which by the popular vote of Kansas, followed by the adoption of a Demo-Pop Tariff, brought on the direst calamity Kansas ever experienced and made Kansas a hissing and a by-word. Such poverty, low prices and distress pauperized thousands of good citizens, and the people who got pinched have not forgotten it. They not only adopted those old Pop propositions, but added new ones, that are as far from Republicanism as daylight from darkness, and are in line with those in the Democratic and Socialist platform. The Republican party survived the Populists, and the Free Silver craze of 1896, and it will survive the one that holds Kansas in its grip to-day.—Independence Tribune.

For the Farmers Also.

Our system of Protection is not for manufacturers alone. It is for farmers also. Whoever deprives our farmers of all the American market they can occupy is false to his principles, and must meet with defeat, for the system must be surrendered which proclaims that American markets are first of all for American citizens, who are engaged in developing the country we already have.

Those are the words of Thomas B. Reed, whose faith in Protection as the best tariff policy to be pursued in this country made him a great exponent of that doctrine. And his rugged honesty gave great weight to the thoughts of his mighty brain. A statue to his memory was unveiled in Portland, Me., last week—Bath N. Y. Courier.

One Consolation.

During the time he acted as United States counsel in Glasgow Bret Harte occasionally indulged in a day's sport with the gun, and it was during one of his shooting excursions that the humorist met with an accident which might have disfigured him for the remainder of his life, his face being badly cut through the recoil of an overloaded gun. Fortunately the doctor's skill prevented him from being permanently marked.

Writing about the occurrence to his friend, T. Edgar Pemberton, who quotes the letter in his "Tribute to Bret Harte," the novelist coincides his letter by telling of an amusing effort which was made to console him on account of the accident.

"When the surgeon was stitching me together," he wrote, "the son of the house, a boy of twelve, came timidly to the door of my room."

"Tell Mr. Bret Harte it's all right," he said. "He killed the hare."

Artificial Flowers.

It was in Italy that a demand for artificial flowers first arose. This was due primarily to a caprice of fashion which demanded that during festivals blossoms in and out of their seasons should be worn and also to the fact that their color and freshness were stable. Later on, in the middle ages, the artificial so far superseded the natural that both men and women decked their heads with imitation flowers of cambric, paper, glass and metal.

Spiteful.

Pneumonia in Mind.

Hearken to such men as you may deem crazy for after all they may know more than anybody else, is the moral to be drawn from the dissertations on psychology and the insane in the current number of the Journal of American Society for Psychical Research.

Now, there was a brakeman who became unintelligible in his talk, either from trying to understand the names of the stations he called or because he had a brain valve loose. He had not attended school since he was 8 years old and could not correctly spell. Yet when he was taken to an asylum he delivered essays on philosophical subjects which those who heard them declared to be no more comprehensible nor incomprehensible than discussions by Kant. The physicians decided that the man was insane.

Another physician, whose experience is quoted from the annals of Psychical Research, had in charge an English cavalry leader, who after going through two mental stages got to a third, where he knew more than anybody else in the place.

He would be dozing in the smoking room of the cozy retreat for the insane where he had been sent and would remark something like this: "I say, doctor, Mr. Blank has just given your housemaid 3 shillings. Poor compensation for all the trouble they have given."

His statement was correct, for at that moment in the upper part of the house the tip was given at the time the clairvoyant lunatic mentally saw it bestowed.

He also told his nurse she had just obtained 5th. Sterling and he could see the servants coming in at the back door of the house, although he was napping by the fire in a position where he could not have seen anything of the kind if he had been awake and sane.

He knew also that his lawyer had written a letter to his wife from London about the time the ink was dry and launched a diatribe against that "fascal" who wanted to take his property away from him.

He foretold an automobile accident to his nephew and sat up for several hours drinking whisky and water, not neglecting to pour out a portion for his kinsman, whom he imagined he saw in the room.

The morning newspaper under the headline of "Terrible Motor Accident" describes the plight of the nephew precisely as the prophetic soul of his uncle had sent it.

"Those incidents," writes Prof. James H. Hyslop in summing up, "tell their own story, and there is no reason why managers of the insane should not be on the lookout for such phenomena."

RENDER.

Sept. 27.—Dr. H. B. Innes was called to Frankfort, on legal business last Wednesday.

James Stephens, of Central City, was here last Wednesday, the guest of his son, Simon.

Frank Hoeker attended the Butler County Fair at Morgantown last Thursday and Friday.

Ed Bean, of Cleaton, and Lafe House, of Fordsville, were here Saturday.

Now what can you say about Taft's administration, isn't this prosperity?

Hazing the Newlyweds.

There is a distinct line which should be drawn between fun and rowdiness. Of late years there has been an interesting tendency on the part of some people who are so miffy that they probably have trouble in restraining themselves from writing at least one almanac a year, to make life miserable for their newly married friends and acquaintances. In their exuberance of spirit they have passed the bounds set by the master of ceremonies at the old-fashioned charivari. First there were the mirth-provoking labels on the tourists' baggage, the placards on the cabs and the telegrams calculated to make life miserable for two persons who had hoped to set out soberly and lovingly upon life's journey.

Now the humorists have become tired of these diversions. Something more original must be done. And it was done, down in Oklahoma a few nights ago. The result is that a bridegroom is near death and the bride looks forward to widowhood. Funny, isn't it? It was all a joke, of course, when the men who had been guests at the wedding attempted to kidnap the young bridegroom just as the train started and allow the bride to proceed on her journey alone. In the scuffle which was inevitable the husband received an injury which may prove fatal. He was hastened to a hospital, where he lies in a precarious condition.

Why should a wedding be regarded as such a side-splitting joke? Marriage is the most sacred of civilization institutions. It is not an occasion for sorrow, or even for tears and loag faces. But neither is it an occasion for the display of wanton foolishness. Let's all wait until there is something to laugh about.—Woman's National Daily.

Correct Fall Neckwear.

The woman who finds that she simply cannot wear one of the fashionable Dutch collars or Toby frills will be glad to know that a great deal of high neckwear will be worn this fall and winter—such as high stiff stocks with long jabots' says Edith Windenfeld in Woman's Home Companion for September. "There will also be a return of the old-time dicker—a stiff chemise of linen. It will be made with or without an attached collar to wear with V-neck tailored blouses. And the woman to whom the low-cut waists are becoming can still wear these comfortable blouses and be quite as modish as she was last spring and summer."

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of womanly diseases. Women shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

DIRTY MONEY TO BE SENT TO THE SUDS.

Germ-Tainted Currency, Will Go to Washboard on Advice of Treasurer.

Lee McClung, Treasurer of the United States, wants to see a sanitary currency. In his annual report he recommends that the government increase its facilities, for exchanging worn and dirty bills for crisp new ones and suggests that the public might be willing to share the expense of doing so.

Treasurer McClung makes a radical recommendation that the national banks be obliged to deposit an additional five per cent redemption fund for these notes early in January each year in addition to the five per cent now required all year round.

He declares that during January, April, May, June and July the regular five per cent fund is not enough because of the drains upon it. Consequently the treasury has to advance money for banks.

Such advances are taken up again when the redemptions ease off. As the notes are obligations of the banks and not the government, Mr. McClung recommends that the banks be requested to deposit more money to cover them.

The balance of the report is devoted to complete review of the finances of the United States Treasury during the fiscal year 1910, which closed on June 30.

During the year the Government took in from ordinary sources $875,511,715, the largest sum in its history. The revised elements placed the total stock of money of the United States in existence at $2,419,591,485, of which more than $1,500,000,000 was in gold. Nearly all the stock was in circulation. The close of the year saw a little more than $2,000,000,000 in use.

The demand for small denominations of paper money was evident all through the year which is taken to indicate an unusual activity of money in circulation. Very nearly 300,000,000 pieces of paper currency were used and more than 200,000,000 were redeemed at the Treasury. Their face value was $1,703,496,885.

For: Motion Judgment.

Stock Law Election Prec. No. 12.

It appearing to the satisfaction of the Court, that the Fiscal Court of Ohio County, by a majority of the members composing the same, has heretofore by regular order decided that elections to regulate the running at large of cattle and the species thereof, in Ohio County, Kentucky, shall be confined to the voting precincts, within said county, and it further appearing, that J. W. Arnold, and 30 other legally qualified voters of Arnold voting precinct No. 32, Dan T. Wilson, and 45 other legally qualified voters, of Horse Branch voting precinct, No. 11, A. S. Kewn, and 30 other legally qualified voters, of Select, voting precinct, No. 10, Sam Morton, and 26 other legally qualified voters, of Smallhouse, voting precinct, No. 17, J. M. Everly, and 25 other legally qualified voters, of Ceralvo, voting precinct, No. 25, and J. M. Taylor, and 19 other legally qualified voters, of East Beaver Dam, voting precinct, No. 13, have each filed their petitions herein praying that an election be held in their respective voting precincts, at the regular election November, 8th, 1910, for the purpose of taking the sense of the legally qualified voters, in each of the said precincts above named, upon the question, "whether or not cattle or any species thereof shall be permitted to run at large upon the public highways, or uninclosed lands, within their respective precincts,"

And it appearing that each of said petitions were duly filed, and have lain over for one month or more, and no exceptions having been filed to any of the same, and that a fee deemed sufficient to defray the necessary expenses having been deposited with the Clerk of this Court by the petitioners, mentioned in each precinct. It is therefore ordered and adjudged that an election be held in each of the aforesaid precincts, as prayed for in the several petitions herein filed, at the regular election November, 8th, 1910, and it is further ordered that the Clerk of this Court, furnish to the various precincts herein named, ballots with the following question submitted thereon, "Are you for or against the running at large of cattle or any species thereof upon the public highways or uninclosed lands?"

In conformity to this judgment, an order heretofore adopted by the Ohio County Fiscal Court, it is further ordered and adjudged by the Court that the officers of the regular election be and they are hereby directed to open a poll at each and all of the voting place in the aforesaid precincts, in Ohio County, Kentucky, on November 8th, 1910 for the purpose of ascertaining the will of the legal voters in each of said precincts upon the question aforesaid. It is further ordered that notice of the submission of the aforesaid question shall be published at least 20 days prior to said election in at least four issues of general circulation published at Hartford, Ohio County, Kentucky.

Ordered that each cause herein, be continued for report of election as provided by Statute.

WHY FARMERS ARE REPUBLICANS.

They Regard the Free-Trade Doctrine of Disaster as Something to be Spurned.

Forced to face the fact of the great benefit which comes to the American farmer by reason of Republican Tariff legislation, the Democratic United States senators who recently submitted their minority report on the question of wages and prices, seek to deceive that prosperous element in our population into the belief that it is Free-Trade and not Protection that this country should have.

Notwithstanding the increase in the price of farm products, the farmer, they say, has realized a small net return on his labor and investment.

The time has gone by, however, when shifty gentlemen can make the American farmer believe that sort of nonsense. The farmer has come into his own and Republicans are glad of it. He knows that conditions were never before better for him than right now and he will not take kindly to the suggestion which the Democrats make in this campaign that he help put them back into power. Many of them are old enough to remember the last Democratic administration which puts into force Free-Trade ideas in this country and compelled farmers to endure four years of awful adversity. Things are different now. Now he is prosperous and he knows the reason why. To quote a leading authority:

To-day there is not a farmer in the country who for a given quantity of his products can not buy and lay down at his door more of the necessities of life, more of clothing, more of everything that goes to make up the comforts of a home, notwithstanding the high prices, than ever before in the history of our country.

Under these circumstances the Democratic doctrine of discontent and disaster appeals to the American farmer only as something to be spurned.—Pleasanton Kan. Observer.

Fall Fairs at Henderson and Madisonville.

Judge C. C. Gliven has announced that he will give a fall Agricultural Fair at Henderson, October 11 to 15 and at Madisonville, October 18 to 22. Fifty Dollars at each fair is offered for tobacco and thirty dollars at each fair for corn exhibits, and liberal premiums for all classes of farm products. The usual racing and ring show features will be given.

October is usually a very pretty season. The farmers' products are matured and they have leisure time to attend. Judge Gliven always gives good fairs, and he ought to be able to give a better fair in October than in July.

SOLDIERS ESCORT OLIVER TO COURT.

Northle Witness Safely Arrives at Hopkinsville Court.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Oct. 2.—Under a strong guard, with Lieut. Col. Bassett in command Milton Oliver, one of the principal witnesses for the prosecution in the so-called night rider cases for trial this week in the Christian Circuit Court, arrived here this afternoon from Lamasco, over the Illinois Central.

Oliver, who was wounded by a would be assassin last May, has fully recovered and seems to be in the best of health. He will occupy a cottage while here and soldiers will remain with him day and night. Owing to the congested condition of the docket the cases against Dr. D. A. Amos, the alleged night rider general; Guy Dunne, B. Malone, Irving Glass, John Robinson and Newton Nichols under indictment on three separate charges for alleged complicity in the Hopkinsville raid, will probably not be reached before Wednesday or Thursday. Both sides are represented by able attorneys. Neither has given out any information concerning the testimony to be introduced. It is reported the prosecution has several important witnesses, whose testimony will be a great surprise.
